Christmas Holidays begin!

Christmas Concert - the girls and boys have been working so hard on our presentation. Last week, one of our fellas told me he has stage fright (cute or what???). We will talk about this and come up with strategies, for example, saying a little prayer, taking several deep breaths together, looking at Mrs. Seward for re-assurance - and remembering that it's all about trying our best and having fun. During one of our rehearsals in front of another Kindergarten class, one of our boys saw his brother and said, "I'm going to make you proud!!!" (and he did ☺).

Thank you for your contributions to our two angel tree gifts! If you have not sent in a donation and would like to, kindly do so by Thursday. We understand completely if you choose not to donate.

Classroom Snuggle Up books and green reading logs can be sent in any time this week. We will resume the program in the new year. Many thanks for your time and support with this.

Please note: if you will be bringing your child home after the Concert, kindly sign them out at the office. We ask that only ONE adult come to the classroom. Muchos gracias.

Pajamas Day and Snowman Soup on Thursday!!! Every day, the children prepare their hearts for Jesus by doing kind deeds for others. To celebrate these actions, we will have a comfy cozy PJ day on Thursday and enjoy some special hot-chocolate.

I would like to take this opportunity to wish all of our families a very Merry Christmas and much joy, health and peace in the New Year. See you in 2018!

With love, Mrs. Seward
